PAINTING METHODS

Are you thinking about cleaning up your oil painting practice? Want to get rid of toxic solvents? Join us for a demonstration video featuring Thomas Kitts, a highly regarded oil painter of more than 30 years, who has a never-ending list of awards. This video shows a painting in progress, so even if you are not about to make the switch to solvent free painting, just stick around to watch Thomas paint!

We can all learn something from this master.

Join us at 6:00 p.m. on zoom to learn about his process and technique.

Also, send your show and tell to Cheryl if you have current work you would like to share.

“When people view my work I want them to see a painting, not a photograph. I want them to experience a surface made alive with color, texture, and the movement of my hand, yet also feel a connection to the reality that gave birth to the work. Up close, I want the painting to explode. From a distance, I want it to optically re-assemble into a whole.” — TJK
